By J.A. Flynn

AUTHORHOUSE, United States, 2004. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 223 x 150 mm. Language: English Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This tale recounts the development of a strategic plan that propels the author into the next stage of her working life - teaching ESL. By implementing the plan, she finds a job via the Internet and accepts a position in Auckland, New Zealand to teach English and accounting to Asians. During those six months, she experiences a thrilling and unexpected transition in her life as she gains a new perspective about life, love and happiness from her ambitious students and the Kiwis who thrive in their small island country. Her solo adventure down under takes place in the middle of a cold, wet winter. As the story unfolds, she becomes enveloped in teaching and in relationships with her new Kiwi friends. The account of this sojourn weaves in anecdotes related to the trials and tribulations of maintaining a bi-continental relationship with her husband. The narrative recounts travel experiences both within Auckland and to neighboring islands as well as exploration of the North and South Island. Intermingled throughout are colorful tidbits that elucidate readers about the culture, the cuisine (recipes...
